Hi,

Markets have been rangebound and there is no remarkable rally in market as you too might have observed that the average value of the stocks have so far been stagnant. So far as the midcaps are concerned i think they will perform when we see renewed interest in midcaps and a good rally in markets the timing of which cant be predicted looking at present economic scenario. But i beleive that since our markets are well placed in long term, so we shud have a decent probability of seeing better prices in both large and small/mid cap stocks depending on improving of sentiment in market. In the meantime i wud think it wud be better to hold on to the stocks , and as per your instruction i will send you timely the weekly statement to have a overview on weekly status.

Thanks and regards sailendra jain.

How long do you think it will take for this to recover the capital.

At least I see no light at the end of tunnel! And I feel I have been badly trapped!

Starting July 2010, we are approaching July 2012..... I can only see massive loses...
